

The first day of school

When it was my first day of school, the recess was different. It was the COVID-19's fault. I didn't like it a lot. Sure, I like the school, it's just that the mask bothers me. I wanted to hug my friend Olivia, but I couldn't because we can't touch each other. I wanted to play tic-tac-toe, but I still couldn't. I didn't know what to play. I even couldn't play rock paper scissor shoot. It was boring not doing anything. We were thinking a lot until we found a game called museum. We asked some more friends to come along and play. We played a lot. Recess was done. When it was recess time again, we played museum again. We just had to train ourselves staying 2 meters or 6 feet apart.
